SECRET BETROTHAL

Engagement to Her Secretary Broken in Response to Her Teacher's Pleas.

Denials That There Was a Romance Follows Mutual Decision to Separate.

Boston, Nov. 18.-Helen Keller, the famous deaf and blind woman, whose development of the power of speech espite her handicaps has astonished the world, has refused a matrimonial career in response to the pleas of the woman who taught her to talk, Mrs. John A.

Miss Keller was engaged to Peter Fagan, a young Socialist, who became acquainted with her when he was a reporter for a Boston newspaper and who was afterward employed by her as sec-retary. Romance came into Miss Keller's life much against the wishes of her-mentor. Mrs. Macy, whose opposition to mentor. Mrs. Macy, whose opposition to her pupil's marriage was based not upon lashness but because she believed that would hinder the further development of a marvellous girl. And so the ro-mance has been shattered. Mr. Fagan left to-night for Tampa. Fla., after adding another denial to the many made by himself and Mrs. Macy during the day that there had been any romance at all. He also realized that it was best for Miss Keller's future that all thoughts of marriage be abandoned and be denied that it ever had been contem-

that about a week ago Mr. Fagan took into his confidence the editor of a Boston paper with which he had been connected and for which Mrs. Macy's husband had been literary editor. He told the editor that he and Miss Keller were deeply in love with each other and that they desired to be married in secret. They planned a literary career and Miss Keller was to abandon the lecture field. in which Mrs. Macy was her necessary interpreter. Mrs. Macy had made known her opposition to the romance and they sought to be married in secret and surprise her, hoping that she would be won over to the inevitable. They thought day and Thursday at Columbia University that the marriage must be without her knowledge or not at all.

The editor diplomatically refused to clusive story when the marriage took sion at this year's conference will be place.
